What is a Boost Your Assertiveness? What is Boost Your Assertiveness? What is a Booster? A Booster is a person who likes to be the center of attention and have everyone watching them. They are great at grabbing attention from people as they shout out ideas and opinions. If they are a friend, they may not be able to control it. They might be flamboyant, and sometimes even dominate the conversation. If they are a co-worker they might dominate meetings and meetings and not leave a discussion until they have bluffed and argued every point in the meeting for themselves. It is the job of the Booster to make sure everyone is watching them. The person that is the Boosters type is very good at getting a room of people to agree with them and show they are the most interesting person in the room. Their job is to make you think they are the smartest person in the room and they are able to pull it off. Generally Boosters are very self-assured and often have a high IQ but they may be arrogant and either be self-deluded or lack the ability to hear what others are saying. When the Boosters are in control of a group of people, they must be very careful to ensure that they do not offend someone. Their worst fear is that someone will call them out on their behaviour. They may find themselves "twitching" or doing something which provokes a confrontation. So when should you notice this Booster behaviour in a friend or a work colleague? The Booster is really all about getting the attention of their audience by "bluffing" the audience into thinking they are the most important person in the room. The Boosters have a fundamental need to be the center of attention and everyone should be watching them. A Boosters emotional drives are: · to be in control · to gain approval · to be "right" · to be smart · to have friends · to be understood · to be loved · to dominate · to be applauded The Boosters might be: · loud · domineering · arrogant · boastful · flamboyant · self-centered · superior · self-deprecating At certain times in his life, the Booster may suffer from depression, because as an adult he may not feel that he has control of his life or his environment.
